PREFACE

The Inventory of Federal Archives in the States is one of the products of the work of the Survey of Federal Archives, which operated as a nation-wide project of the Works Progress Administration from January 1, 1936 to June 30, 1937, and has been continued in Massachusetts since that date as a state project of that Administration.

The plan for the organization of the Inventory is as follows: Series I consists of reports on the administration of the Survey, acknowledgments, and general discussions of the location, condition, and content of federal archives in the states. Succeeding series contain the detailed information secured by workers of the Survey, in inventory form, a separate series number being assigned to each of the executive departments (except the Department of State) and other major units of the Federal Government. Within each series No. 1 is a general introduction to the field organization and records of the governmental agency concerned; the succeeding numbers contain the inventory proper, separate numbers being assigned to each state in alphabetical order. Thus, in each series, the inventory for Alabama is No. 2, that for Arizona No. 3, that for Arkansas No. 4, etc.

For each local office information regarding each series, or unit of related records, is presented in the following order: title, inclusive dates ("to date" indicating an open file at the time the information was secured), general description of informational content, description of the system of filing or indexing (if any), a statement of frequency and purpose of use, form of the record itself (bound volumes, sheets in folders, etc.), linear footage, description of the containers, physical condition of the records (not stated if satisfactory), location by room number or other identifying information, and finally, the number of the Form 58SA on which this information was originally recorded by a Survey worker and from which it was abstracted for the Inventory. This form is on file in The National Archives. When it contains substantial information on addenda sheets which has not been included in the mimeographed abstract, indication of this is given by use of the reference "See addenda."

In Massachusetts the work of the Survey has been under the direction of Mr. J. W. McElroy. This inventory of the records of the Department of Commerce in Massachusetts was prepared in the Boston office of the Survey, and was edited before final typing by Dr. Erik Ashorn of the Washington office.

1. The first group of people who are interested in the study of the history of the world are the historians. They are people who study the past and try to understand what happened and why it happened. They use a variety of sources, including books, documents, and artifacts, to reconstruct the past. They also try to understand the people who lived in the past and how they thought and felt. Historians are interested in the history of the world because it helps us to understand the world we live in today.

The first part of the chapter discusses the importance of the study of the history of the United States. It is a study of the past, but it is also a study of the present. The history of the United States is a story of the struggle for freedom and the pursuit of the American dream. It is a story of the triumph of the human spirit over adversity and the power of the individual to make a difference in the world.

The second part of the chapter discusses the role of the government in the United States. It is a study of the power of the state and the responsibilities of the citizen. The government is a necessary institution, but it is also a potential threat to the freedom of the individual. The citizen must be vigilant and active in the political process to ensure that the government remains accountable to the people.

The third part of the chapter discusses the role of the individual in the United States. It is a study of the power of the individual and the responsibilities of the citizen. The individual is the foundation of the nation, and the individual's actions can make a difference in the world. The citizen must be active and engaged in the political process to ensure that the government remains accountable to the people.

The fourth part of the chapter discusses the role of the media in the United States. It is a study of the power of the press and the responsibilities of the citizen. The media is a powerful institution, but it is also a potential threat to the freedom of the individual. The citizen must be vigilant and active in the political process to ensure that the media remains accountable to the people.

The fifth part of the chapter discusses the role of the economy in the United States. It is a study of the power of the market and the responsibilities of the citizen. The economy is a powerful institution, but it is also a potential threat to the freedom of the individual. The citizen must be vigilant and active in the political process to ensure that the economy remains accountable to the people.

The sixth part of the chapter discusses the role of the culture in the United States. It is a study of the power of the arts and the responsibilities of the citizen. The culture is a powerful institution, but it is also a potential threat to the freedom of the individual. The citizen must be vigilant and active in the political process to ensure that the culture remains accountable to the people.

The seventh part of the chapter discusses the role of the environment in the United States. It is a study of the power of the natural world and the responsibilities of the citizen. The environment is a powerful institution, but it is also a potential threat to the freedom of the individual. The citizen must be vigilant and active in the political process to ensure that the environment remains accountable to the people.

1. The first step is to identify the problem or question that needs to be answered. This involves understanding the context and the specific requirements of the task.

1. The first of these is the fact that the Commission has not yet received any information from the Government of the United Kingdom regarding the progress of its investigation into the alleged activities of the British Security Services in the United States. This is a matter of great importance, and the Commission is deeply concerned that the Government should not fail to provide the necessary information in a timely manner.

The Customs Service was established in Boston in 1789, with offices in the Exchange, and after a series of removals, the agency was finally quartered in the present Custom House, which was erected in 1849 and later remodeled.

In 1912, the Customs Service was redistricted and Massachusetts became collection district 4, under the jurisdiction of the collector at Boston, and nine Massachusetts ports became subports of Boston, each under a deputy collector.

Most of the records in the Custom House are well arranged and in good condition. The records in the Court House and Post Office Building are in excellent condition. Some of the earliest records are to be found in the Baker Library, Harvard University. One serial was found at the Army Base. Registers of Vessels for 1789 - 1802 were sent to Washington, D.C., for use in connection with French Spoilation Claims. Many records were destroyed by fire in 1893, including Passenger Lists, 1813 - 1883, and Crew Lists, 1803 - 1891.

The following table shows the results of the regression analysis for the dependent variable "Number of children in the household" (N = 1,000). The independent variables are "Age of the head of household" and "Gender of the head of household". The results are presented in the following table:

1. The first step in the process is to identify the problem or issue that needs to be addressed. This involves gathering information and understanding the context of the problem.

1. The first step in the process of identifying a problem is to recognize that a problem exists. This is often done by comparing current performance with a desired state or goal. If there is a significant difference, a problem is identified.

2. The second step is to define the problem more precisely. This involves identifying the specific aspects of the problem that are causing concern and determining the scope of the problem. This step is crucial for developing an effective solution.

3. The third step is to analyze the problem. This involves identifying the causes of the problem and determining the relationships between different factors. This step is often the most challenging, as it requires a deep understanding of the system and the ability to identify hidden causes.

4. The fourth step is to develop a solution. This involves identifying potential solutions and evaluating them based on their effectiveness, feasibility, and cost. This step is often the most creative, as it requires thinking outside the box to find a solution that addresses the problem.

5. The fifth step is to implement the solution. This involves putting the solution into practice and monitoring its progress. This step is often the most difficult, as it requires coordination and communication with other stakeholders.

6. The sixth step is to evaluate the solution. This involves assessing the effectiveness of the solution and determining whether it has solved the problem. This step is often the most overlooked, as it requires a commitment to ongoing evaluation and improvement.

1. The first step in the process is to identify the problem or issue that needs to be addressed. This involves gathering information and understanding the context of the problem.

2. Once the problem is identified, the next step is to define the objectives and goals of the project. This helps to clarify what needs to be achieved and provides a clear direction for the team.

3. The third step is to develop a plan or strategy to address the problem. This involves breaking down the problem into smaller, manageable tasks and determining the resources needed to complete each task.

4. The fourth step is to implement the plan. This involves putting the strategy into action and monitoring progress regularly to ensure that the project is on track.

5. Finally, the fifth step is to evaluate the results of the project. This involves assessing the outcomes against the objectives and goals and identifying any areas for improvement.

1. Journal of the American Medical Association, 1997; 277: 1033-1038.

1. The first part of the document is a letter from the President of the United States to the Congress, dated January 3, 1862. The letter is addressed to the Senate and House of Representatives, and is signed by Abraham Lincoln. The letter discusses the state of the Union and the progress of the war against the Confederacy. It also mentions the President's efforts to maintain the Union and his commitment to the principles of liberty and justice for all.

1. The first part of the document is a letter from the President of the United States to the Congress, dated January 1, 1861. It is a formal address, and it is the first of its kind since the signing of the Constitution. The President, James Buchanan, is addressing the Congress, and he is doing so in a very formal and dignified manner. He is discussing the state of the Union, and he is discussing the issues that are facing the country at that time. He is also discussing the role of the President, and he is discussing the responsibilities of the Congress. The letter is a very important document, and it is a very interesting one to read. It gives us a glimpse into the mind of a President, and it gives us a glimpse into the state of the country at that time. It is a document that is worth reading, and it is a document that is worth studying.

1. The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that this is essential for the proper management of the organization's finances and for ensuring that all activities are properly documented.

2. The second part of the document outlines the various methods used to collect and analyze data. It describes how data is gathered from different sources and how it is then processed to identify trends and patterns. This section also discusses the importance of data security and the measures taken to protect sensitive information.

3. The third part of the document focuses on the results of the data analysis. It presents a series of charts and graphs that illustrate the findings of the study. These results are then discussed in detail, highlighting the key points and the implications of the data. The section concludes with a summary of the overall findings and a recommendation for further research.

4. The fourth part of the document provides a detailed description of the methodology used in the study. It explains the various steps involved in the data collection and analysis process, from the initial planning to the final reporting. This section is intended to provide a clear and concise overview of the research process for anyone interested in replicating the study.

5. The fifth part of the document discusses the limitations of the study. It acknowledges that there are certain factors that may have influenced the results and that the study may not be applicable to all situations. This section also discusses the potential for future research to build on the findings of this study and to address the limitations identified.

6. The sixth part of the document provides a conclusion to the study. It summarizes the main findings and the overall conclusions drawn from the data. This section also includes a final recommendation for the organization based on the results of the study. The conclusion is intended to provide a clear and concise summary of the research and to provide a basis for decision-making.

7. The seventh part of the document is a list of references. It includes a list of all the sources used in the study, including books, articles, and other documents. This section is intended to provide a clear and concise list of the sources used in the research and to provide a basis for further research.

8. The eighth part of the document is a list of appendices. It includes a list of all the additional information that is provided in the study, including tables, figures, and other documents. This section is intended to provide a clear and concise list of the additional information provided in the research and to provide a basis for further research.

1. The purpose of this document is to provide a comprehensive overview of the current state of the project and to identify the key areas for improvement. The document is intended for use by all project team members and is to be kept confidential.

2. The project has been successful in many respects, but there are several areas that require attention. The most significant of these are the need for improved communication, the need for better resource management, and the need for more frequent reporting.

3. In order to address these issues, the project team has decided to implement a series of changes. These changes include the establishment of a communication committee, the implementation of a new resource management system, and the introduction of more frequent reporting.

4. The project team is confident that these changes will result in a more successful project. However, it is important that all team members understand the importance of these changes and commit to their implementation.

5. The project team will continue to monitor the progress of the project and will make adjustments as needed. The goal is to complete the project on time and within budget.

6. The project team is grateful for the support and assistance of all stakeholders. The project is a testament to the power of teamwork and collaboration.

7. The project team is committed to the success of the project and will continue to work hard to achieve the project's goals.

8. The project team is confident that the project will be a success and that the changes implemented will result in a more efficient and effective project.

The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that proper record-keeping is essential for the integrity of the financial system and for the ability to detect and prevent fraud. The document also outlines the responsibilities of individuals involved in the process, including the need for transparency and accountability.

The second part of the document provides a detailed overview of the various methods used to collect and analyze data. It describes the different types of data sources, such as surveys, interviews, and focus groups, and explains how this information is used to identify trends and patterns. The document also discusses the challenges associated with data collection and analysis, such as ensuring the reliability and validity of the data.

The third part of the document focuses on the development and implementation of policies and procedures. It outlines the steps involved in creating a comprehensive policy framework, including the need for stakeholder input and consultation. The document also discusses the importance of regular monitoring and evaluation to ensure that the policies remain effective and relevant over time.

The fourth part of the document addresses the issue of communication and public engagement. It emphasizes the need for clear and consistent messaging across all channels and the importance of involving the public in the decision-making process. The document also discusses the role of the media in shaping public opinion and the need for transparency in government operations.

The final part of the document provides a summary of the key findings and recommendations. It highlights the need for continued collaboration and partnership between all stakeholders and the importance of ongoing research and innovation in the field. The document concludes by expressing confidence in the ability of the organization to achieve its goals and improve the lives of the people it serves.

THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES

The history of the United States is a story of growth and change. It begins with the first settlers, who came to the Americas in search of a new life. They found a land of opportunity, but also one of hardship. The early years were marked by struggle and sacrifice, as the settlers fought to establish a new society in a remote and often hostile environment. Over time, the United States grew from a small collection of colonies into a powerful nation. This growth was driven by a combination of factors, including the discovery of new lands, the influx of immigrants, and the development of a strong economy. The United States emerged as a global power, with a reputation for innovation and progress. However, the path to this greatness was not without its challenges. The country faced numerous internal conflicts, including the American Civil War, which tested the nation's unity and values. Despite these challenges, the United States emerged stronger and more united than ever before. Today, the United States stands as a beacon of hope and freedom, a nation that has overcome adversity and built a legacy of greatness.

• Prevalence: The proportion of the population that has a disease at a specific point in time. It is a snapshot of the disease burden in a community at a particular moment.

• Incidence: The number of new cases of a disease that occur in a population over a specific period of time. It measures the rate at which new cases are occurring.

• Prevalence vs. Incidence: Prevalence is the total number of cases (both new and existing) at a given time, while incidence is the number of new cases occurring over a period of time. Prevalence is influenced by both the incidence and the duration of the disease.

• Point Prevalence: The proportion of the population with a disease at a single point in time.

• Period Prevalence: The proportion of the population with a disease over a specific period of time.

• Incidence Rate: The number of new cases of a disease per unit of time, often expressed as the number of cases per 1,000 people per year.

• Relative Risk (RR): A measure of the risk of developing a disease in one group compared to another group. It is calculated as the ratio of the incidence rates in the two groups.

• Attributable Risk (AR): The difference in the incidence rates between the exposed and unexposed groups, representing the risk that can be attributed to the exposure.

• Population Attributable Risk (PAR): The proportion of the total incidence of a disease in a population that can be attributed to a specific exposure.

• Number Needed to Treat (NNT): The number of patients that need to be treated with a specific intervention to prevent one additional adverse outcome.

• Number Needed to Harm (NNH): The number of patients that need to be treated with a specific intervention to cause one additional adverse outcome.

• Relative Risk Reduction (RRR): The proportion of the risk of developing a disease that is reduced by an intervention, calculated as the relative risk minus one.

• Absolute Risk Reduction (ARR): The difference in the incidence rates between the control and treatment groups, representing the absolute reduction in risk.

• Relative Risk Increase (RRI): The proportion of the risk of developing a disease that is increased by an intervention, calculated as the relative risk plus one.

• Absolute Risk Increase (ARI): The difference in the incidence rates between the control and treatment groups, representing the absolute increase in risk.

• Confidence Interval (CI): A range of values that is likely to contain the true value of a parameter, such as a risk ratio or odds ratio. It is typically expressed as a percentage, such as 95% CI.

• P-value: A statistical measure of the probability of observing a result as extreme as the one observed, assuming that the null hypothesis is true. A p-value less than 0.05 is typically considered statistically significant.

• Null Hypothesis (H0): The hypothesis that there is no difference between the groups being compared, or that the intervention has no effect.

• Alternative Hypothesis (H1): The hypothesis that there is a difference between the groups being compared, or that the intervention has an effect.

• Statistical Significance: A measure of the probability of observing a result as extreme as the one observed, assuming that the null hypothesis is true. A p-value less than 0.05 is typically considered statistically significant.

• Power: The probability of correctly rejecting the null hypothesis when it is false, or the probability of detecting a true effect if one exists.

• Effect Size: A measure of the magnitude of the effect of an intervention, such as the difference in the incidence rates between the control and treatment groups.

• Biases: Systematic errors that can lead to incorrect conclusions in a study. Common biases include selection bias, information bias, and confounding.

• Confounding: A situation in which a third variable, known as a confounder, is associated with both the exposure and the outcome, leading to a spurious association between the exposure and the outcome.

• Selection Bias: A bias that occurs when the selection of participants for a study is related to the exposure or outcome, leading to a non-representative sample.

• Information Bias: A bias that occurs when the measurement of the exposure or outcome is related to the exposure or outcome, leading to a non-accurate measurement.

• Random Error: The natural variability in the data that occurs due to chance, leading to a non-precise estimate of the true value.

• Systematic Error: A bias that occurs when the measurement of the exposure or outcome is consistently off by a certain amount, leading to a non-accurate estimate of the true value.

• Internal Validity: The extent to which the results of a study can be attributed to the intervention, rather than to other factors.

• External Validity: The extent to which the results of a study can be generalized to other populations or settings.

• Generalizability: The extent to which the results of a study can be applied to other populations or settings.

• Replicability: The extent to which the results of a study can be reproduced in a subsequent study.

• Transparency: The extent to which the methods and results of a study are clearly and honestly reported.

• Accountability: The extent to which the researchers are responsible for the results of the study and the potential harms of the intervention.

• Integrity: The extent to which the researchers adhere to ethical principles and standards in the conduct of the study.

• Collaboration: The extent to which researchers work together to share knowledge and resources, leading to a more comprehensive understanding of the problem.

• Communication: The extent to which the results of the study are effectively communicated to the public and other stakeholders.

• Education: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the public and other stakeholders about the risks and benefits of the intervention.

• Policy: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of public health policies and programs.

• Practice: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the practice of healthcare providers and other professionals.

• Research: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of new research and interventions.

• Knowledge: The extent to which the results of the study are used to increase our understanding of the disease and its causes.

• Understanding: The extent to which the results of the study are used to increase our understanding of the disease and its causes.

• Prevention: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to prevent the disease.

• Treatment: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to treat the disease.

• Control: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to control the disease.

• Eradication: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to eradicate the disease.

• Elimination: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to eliminate the disease.

• Reduction: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to reduce the burden of the disease.

• Improvement: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve the health of the population.

• Well-being: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve the well-being of the population.

• Quality of Life: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve the quality of life of the population.

• Health: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve the health of the population.

• Life Expectancy: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve life expectancy.

• Mortality: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to reduce mortality.

• Morbidity: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to reduce morbidity.

• Disability: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to reduce disability.

• Cost: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to reduce the cost of healthcare.

• Efficiency: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve the efficiency of healthcare.

• Effectiveness: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve the effectiveness of healthcare.

• Equity: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve equity in healthcare.

• Justice: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve justice in healthcare.

• Freedom: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve freedom in healthcare.

• Security: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve security in healthcare.

• Stability: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve stability in healthcare.

• Peace: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve peace in healthcare.

• Cooperation: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve cooperation in healthcare.

• Participation: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve participation in healthcare.

• Empowerment: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve empowerment in healthcare.

• Accountability: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve accountability in healthcare.

• Integrity: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve integrity in healthcare.

• Collaboration: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve collaboration in healthcare.

• Communication: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve communication in healthcare.

• Education: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve education in healthcare.

• Policy: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve policy in healthcare.

• Practice: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve practice in healthcare.

• Research: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve research in healthcare.

• Knowledge: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve knowledge in healthcare.

• Understanding: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve understanding in healthcare.

• Prevention: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve prevention in healthcare.

• Treatment: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve treatment in healthcare.

• Control: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve control in healthcare.

• Eradication: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve eradication in healthcare.

• Elimination: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve elimination in healthcare.

• Reduction: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve reduction in healthcare.

• Improvement: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve improvement in healthcare.

• Well-being: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve well-being in healthcare.

• Quality of Life: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve quality of life in healthcare.

• Health: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve health in healthcare.

• Life Expectancy: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve life expectancy in healthcare.

• Mortality: The extent to which the results of the study are used to inform the development of strategies to improve mortality in healthcare.

1. The first step in the process of the investigation is to identify the problem. This involves a thorough review of the available information and a clear definition of the issue at hand. Once the problem is identified, the next step is to gather data. This can be done through various methods, including interviews, surveys, and experiments. The data collected should be analyzed to identify patterns and trends. Finally, a conclusion should be drawn based on the findings of the investigation. This conclusion should be supported by the data and should provide a clear answer to the original question.

1. The first step is to identify the problem or question that needs to be answered. This involves understanding the context and the specific requirements of the task.

2. The second step is to gather relevant information and data. This can be done through research, consultation with experts, or by analyzing existing data sets.

3. The third step is to develop a plan or strategy to address the problem. This involves breaking down the problem into smaller, manageable parts and determining the best approach to solve each part.

4. The fourth step is to implement the plan. This involves carrying out the tasks and activities that have been identified in the plan.

5. The fifth step is to evaluate the results. This involves comparing the actual outcomes with the expected outcomes and identifying any areas for improvement.

6. The sixth step is to communicate the findings. This involves sharing the results of the analysis with the relevant stakeholders and providing recommendations for action.

7. The seventh step is to monitor and review the process. This involves keeping track of the progress of the project and making adjustments as needed to ensure that the project is completed successfully.

8. The eighth step is to document the process. This involves creating a record of the steps taken and the results achieved, which can be used for future reference and learning.

9. The ninth step is to reflect on the experience. This involves thinking about what was learned from the project and how it can be applied to future projects.

10. The tenth step is to celebrate the success. This involves acknowledging the achievements of the team and the successful completion of the project.

| Variable | Coefficient | Standard Error | t-statistic | p-value |
|----------|-------------|----------------|-------------|---------|
| Age | 0.05 | 0.01 | 5.00 | 0.0001 |
| Gender | 0.10 | 0.02 | 5.00 | 0.0001 |

The results indicate that both "Age" and "Gender" are significant predictors of the number of children. The coefficient for "Age" is 0.05, and the coefficient for "Gender" is 0.10. The t-statistics for both variables are 5.00, and the p-values are 0.0001.

1. The first step is to identify the problem or question that needs to be answered. This involves understanding the context and the specific requirements of the task.

1. The first of these is the fact that the Commission has not yet received any information from the Government of the United States regarding the activities of the Committee for the Liberation of the People of the East (CLPE) in the United States. This is a serious omission, as the CLPE is a known and active organization which has been operating in the United States for many years. The Commission should be kept informed of any such activities, as they may have a bearing on the Commission's work.

1. The first of these is the fact that the United States has a large and growing population of people who are not citizens of the United States. This is a result of the large number of immigrants who have come to the United States in recent years, and the fact that many of these immigrants are not naturalized citizens.

1. The first of the two main objectives of the program is to provide a comprehensive and accurate picture of the current situation in the field. This is to be achieved by the collection and analysis of all available information, including intelligence, reports, and other sources. The second objective is to provide a clear and concise summary of the findings, which will be used to inform decision-making at the highest levels of the organization.

2. The program is designed to be flexible and adaptable, allowing for changes in the field situation and the needs of the organization. It is also designed to be cost-effective, ensuring that the program can be sustained over the long term. The program will be implemented in a phased manner, with the first phase focusing on the collection and analysis of information, and the second phase focusing on the development of a summary and the dissemination of findings.

3. The program will be managed by a dedicated team, which will be responsible for the day-to-day operations of the program. This team will be supported by a number of other staff, who will be responsible for the collection and analysis of information. The program will be subject to regular review and evaluation, to ensure that it is meeting its objectives and that it is being implemented effectively.

4. The program will be a key component of the organization's overall strategy, and it will be used to inform decision-making at the highest levels of the organization. It will also be used to provide a clear and concise summary of the findings, which will be used to inform decision-making at the highest levels of the organization.

FALL RIVER

OFFICE OF DEPUTY COLLECTOR
Post Office and Custom House
Pocasset and Second Sts.

Established in 1789, in a dwelling house which still stands on Pleasant Street in Dighton, this agency moved to Fall River in 1834. In 1843, a fire destroyed the building and most of the records and after a year in temporary quarters at North Main and Elm Streets space was obtained in Fall River City Hall. In 1854, the office was moved to the Metacomet Bank Building, at Anawan and Water Streets, and in 1880, to the Federal Building, then under construction at Bedford and Second Streets. In 1931, during the construction of its present quarters, it occupied rooms in the Brown Building at Pine and North Main Streets. Records of this agency are kept in three rooms on the second floor and one room in the basement; those in the basement are exposed to moisture from the Quequechan River which runs beneath the building. In 1913, the District of Fall River was abolished and Fall River became a sub-port of the port of Boston, in collection district 4.

GLOUCESTER

OFFICE OF DEPUTY COLLECTOR Post Office Bldg., 15 Dale Ave.

The Customs Service was established in Gloucester in 1789. Successive collectors carried on customs activities in their respective homes from that date until 1854, when an office was set up in the Post Office Building on Main Street. The agency occupied this space for 80 years and until the new Post Office Building was erected in 1934. The town was made a subport of the district headquarters in Boston in 1913, and since that time a deputy collector and a small staff have performed all customs functions. Almost all of the earlier records of the agency were transferred several years ago to the Customs House and the Essex Institute in Salem, Mass. Consequently, most of the records discovered at Gloucester and reported upon are comparatively recent (a few date from the 1840's) and all of them apparently are in excellent condition.

For other records, see Salem.

NEW BEDFORD

OFFICE OF DEPUTY COLLECTOR

The collections of customs began at the port of New Bedford with the establishment of the Federal Government in 1789. Until 1913 the collector at this port reported direct to Washington, D.C. In 1913 the port was made a subport of the Boston district and a deputy collector was placed in charge. Previous to 1836 the customhouse was located at 45 Middle Street. For a short while in 1856 it was on the 2d floor in a building on the corner of Union and Water Streets. The present building was erected in 1836 and is of 2d class construction. The records are maintained in poor condition on shelves in bookcases, cabinets, a trunk, closets, wooden boxes, and scattered on floors in offices and storage rooms of this three-story colonial building. They are crowded, inaccessible, and often in proximity to bales of cotton, are not protected against fire or theft, and are for the most part dirty. Some have been destroyed by fire, and Registers 1792 - 1801 were sent to Washington, D.C. Many compound entries have overlapping dates.

The Public Library at New Bedford now houses many of the records of the port for the early part of the 19th century. In addition to the records of this agency, the Customhouse is also the depository for the records of the port of Barnstable.

1. The first step in the process of the development of the new system is the identification of the need for a new system. This is done by the management of the organization, who recognize that the existing system is no longer adequate to meet the needs of the organization. The management then initiates a study to determine the requirements for a new system. This study is conducted by a team of experts, who analyze the current system and identify the areas where improvements are needed. The team then develops a list of requirements for the new system, which are used as a basis for the design and development of the system.

1. The first of these is the fact that the United States has a large and growing population of people who are of Mexican descent. This population is concentrated in the southwestern United States, particularly in California, Arizona, and New Mexico. It is estimated that there are over 10 million people of Mexican descent in the United States, and this number is expected to increase significantly in the future.

1. The first step in the process of identifying a problem is to define the problem. This involves identifying the symptoms of the problem and determining the scope of the problem. Once the problem has been defined, the next step is to identify the causes of the problem. This involves identifying the factors that are contributing to the problem and determining the underlying causes. Once the causes have been identified, the next step is to develop a plan of action. This involves identifying the steps that need to be taken to solve the problem and determining the resources that will be needed to implement the plan. Once a plan of action has been developed, the final step is to implement the plan. This involves carrying out the steps that have been identified in the plan and monitoring the progress of the implementation.

1. I would like to inform you that I have received your letter dated 10/10/78 regarding the above mentioned matter. I am sorry that I cannot provide you with a more definitive answer at this time. The information provided to me is being reviewed by the appropriate authorities.

of New Bedford. They are of inestimable value because they present graphic details of the greatest era of shipping in the history of the city. Their present location makes them more available for research by historians and writers of historical fiction. Here may be found most of the records connected with the "New Bedford Whalers", the ships that made New Bedford better known than London in places off the shipping lanes.

The archives include fiscal records and correspondence, entrances, clearances, manifests, licenses, certificates, bonds, oaths, letters, reports of lighthouse keepers, crew lists, shipping agreements, and other marine papers. They are stored on steel shelves on the 5th stack floor and are for the most part brittle and dirty. Some of the papers and volumes have been torn and damaged by careless handling, and in a few cases have been soaked by water. Vandals have cut the signatures of Presidents from almost all the "Sea Letters".

3207. SAMPLE FORMS FOR MAKING OUT REPORTS, 1789. Forms for payment of duties, abstracts of payments made, receipts for Treasury warrants, daily cash journal entries, and quarterly reports on duties collected. See addenda for copies of forms. (Rarely, research.) 3 x 7 loose sheets, $\frac{1}{2}$ in., on steel shelf. Brittle, dirty, torn. 1st alcove, 5th stack floor. (1401)

3208. OWNERS' AND MASTERS' OATHS, 1795; 1798; 1804 - 1809; 1811 - 1819; 1821 - 1824; Feb. 8 - Aug. 8, 1870. Sworn statements that vessel and papers would only be used for purposes declared: name of master or owner, statement of citizenship, place of residence, vessel's name, tonnage, and where built. (Rarely, research.) 3 x $7\frac{1}{2}$ bundles and $10\frac{1}{2}$ x 16 vol., $8\frac{1}{4}$ in., on steel shelves. Dirty; 1795 - 1824, brittle, torn. 1st alcove, 5th stack floor. (1302, 1223)

3209. REGISTER BONDS, 1799 - 1806; Mar. 21, 1840 - 1849; 1851 - 1855; 1855 - Dec. 31, 1869. Bonds of masters on registration of vessels to insure that vessel will be used only for the purpose for which it was registered, and that registration will be surrendered to Customs Service at end of period or, if vessel is lost, it will be surrendered to nearest United States consul. (Rarely, research.) Various sized vols. and bundles, 1 ft. 11 in., on steel shelves. Dirty; 1799 - 1806, brittle; 1843 - 1869, damaged by careless handling, faulty containers. 1st alcove, 5th stack floor. (1285, 1187, 1192)

3210. ENTRIES OF MERCHANDISE IMPORTED INTO THE DISTRICT, 1803; 1813 - 1816; 1818 - 1819; 1840; 1845; 1847; 1854; 1856 - 1857; 1859; 1863 - 1869. Foreign merchandise entries: name of master, name of vessel, port of clearance, date and port of arrival, list of cargo, marks, value subject to ad valorem, amount of free goods, total amount of invoice. 1854 - 1869, arranged chronologically. (Rarely, research.) Various sized bundles, 1 ft. $2\frac{1}{2}$ in., on steel shelves. Dirty; 1803 - 1847, brittle, torn. 1st, 3d, and 4th alcove, 5th stack floor. (1281, 1294, 1485, 1522)

3486. PARCHMENT INDENTURES (SHIPS' PASSPORTS), 1817; 1828; 1831; 1832; 1833; 1836; 1841. Seven embellished parchment indentures issued to American vessels for identification, during the period when tribute was being exacted by pirates on the Barbary Coast, to assure unmolested passage of merchant vessels. The top edge of each of these papers is serrated, presumably to match wooden blocks carved to complement the serrations. These blocks are supposed to have been in the hands of the pirates, who being unable to read, could distinguish American vessels by fitting the serrated documents against the blocks. Signed by President and Secretary of State, government wafer seal attached. See addenda for detailed description. (Occasionally, public.) 11×18 parchment sheets (7), in locked display case. Exhibition Room. (1472)

Barnstable Records
New Bedford Custom House

The Barnstable district was created as district VII by Act of Congress in 1789. It included the port of Barnstable and subports of Provincetown, Sandwich, Wellfleet, Chatham, and later, Falmouth, Hyannis, and Dennis. The archives of this district, now stored at the New Bedford Custom House, show evidence of age, careless handling, and faulty containers, many are torn, with broken bindings and brittle pages. In many cases documentary stamps and many important signatures have been torn out by vandals. At present they are inadequately protected against fire, theft, and dirt.

1. The first step in the process of determining the value of a property is to identify the property and its location. This is done by obtaining a description of the property from the owner or a reliable source. The description should include the name of the property, its address, and any other identifying information. Once the property has been identified, the next step is to determine its value. This is done by comparing the property to similar properties in the area and by considering factors such as the size, condition, and location of the property. The final step is to determine the value of the property based on the information gathered in the previous steps.

PLYMOUTH

Post Office Bldg., Main St. Extension and Leyden St.

The Customs Service for the district of Plymouth was established December 18, 1790, with headquarters in the Leyden Block in that flourishing port. As its trade diminished during the 19th century, the agency moved to smaller quarters in the Governor Bradford Block, June 31, 1906; and with the continued decrease in the importance of the office, it was made a subport of district 4, under the collector in Boston, July 1, 1913. Two years later, a single room was found sufficient for its needs, and the deputy collector was established in the then new Post Office Building, where he has since continued alone. As a subport, it sends many of its important records to Boston. Three years of current material and duplicate forms of local value are retained. The older records, some dating back 140 years, were found in a corner of the basement, where they were thrown haphazardly in 1915, at the bottom of a heap grown, by subsequent accretion of less important papers, to a height of six feet. Ledgers, journals, and record books of various descriptions, together with old publications and maps, were cleaned, sorted, and put into fair order by survey workers reporting upon them.

1. The first of these is the fact that the Commission has not yet received any information from the Government of the United States regarding the activities of the Committee for the Liberation of the Americas (CLA) in the United States. The Commission is therefore unable to determine whether the CLA is active in the United States or whether it is merely a propaganda organization.

PROVINCETOWN

Office of Deputy Collector
Post Office Building, 217 Commercial St.

As near as can be ascertained, a deputy collector was first appointed in Provincetown in 1860. Until 1885, each appointee usually selected his own residence as an office; after that date, the new collector's office was moved to a commercial building in the town. Instances were cited of some collectors' refusals to turn over the keys and papers of the office to new appointees. In 1913, the port of Provincetown came under the jurisdiction of Boston; prior to that date, the office had been classed as a subport of the district of Barnstable. A few fishing vessels and yachts carry on most of the maritime activities which are supervised by the Customs Service today, imports and exports are rarely handled, and the present deputy collector serves on a part time basis only.

Some old Provincetown customs records were returned here in 1919, when the Barnstable office was abolished. In the miscellaneous assortment of bound volumes and bundled papers, 1869 was the earliest date reported upon. These records are stored haphazardly in an open box in the attic; current records are either sent to Boston or maintained safely in the two rooms used by the collector.

SALEM

OFFICE OF DEPUTY COLLECTOR

Custom House

(A) Custom House, 178 Derby St.

(B) Essex Institute, 132 Essex St.

The Customs Service at the port of Salem was established, under a collector, in 1789. July 1, 1913, Salem became a subport of Boston in collection district 4, in charge of a deputy collector. It was formerly one of the busiest ports on the Atlantic coast, collections reaching about $7,225,000 during peak years. Collections currently average about $10,000 annually. Prior to 1913, Salem and Beverly were included in the district of Salem. Since that time Salem, Beverly, Marblehead, and Lynn have been under the jurisdiction of the deputy collector at Salem. Active records of this agency are kept in four rooms in the Custom House. All the archives inventoried, considering their age, are in good condition. They are filed chronologically unless otherwise specified.

Many of the older records of the port of Salem, as well as records of the ports of Marblehead, Gloucester, and Newburyport, have been deposited for safe keeping in the Essex Institute (Building B), a private historical society. In this depository are records pertaining to the Public Health Service and to the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation and Shipping Commissioner of the Department of Commerce which concern the cities and towns of Gloucester, Ipswich, Marblehead, and Newburyport. These, segregated by cities and towns, appear at the end of the inventory of this agency.

1. The first step in the process of the investigation is the identification of the problem. This is done by the investigator who is assigned to the case. The investigator must first determine the nature of the problem and the scope of the investigation. This is done by interviewing the witnesses and the parties involved in the case. The investigator must also determine the time and place of the incident and the circumstances surrounding it. This information is then used to develop a plan of investigation.

1. The first part of the document is a letter from the President of the United States to the Congress, dated January 3, 1862. It is a very long letter, and it contains a great deal of information about the state of the country at that time. It is a very important document, and it is one of the most interesting documents in the collection.

1. The first of these is the fact that the

SPRINGFIELD

OFFICE OF DEPUTY COLLECTOR
Post Office and Court House
436 Dwight St.

A customs office was established in Springfield in February 1891. The town was an independent port of entry from that date until July 1, 1913, when it was reclassified as a subport and brought under the jurisdiction of the Boston headquarters. From the date of its establishment, it was quartered in the old Post Office Building on Main Street until 1932, when the acting deputy collector and his staff moved to the newly constructed Federal Building, a part of which had been especially designed for the Customs Service. The agency occupies three offices, on first floor, the appraising room on the second floor, and a general storeroom in the basement of the building. The supervision of a few motor boats and other small river craft comprises all of the water activities of this office; most of its work is concerned with the collection of fees, duties, and other revenue, or the bonding of imports and exports warehoused in the city. The records of the agency are apparently intact; the older records in mailed boxes in the basement storeroom escaped, without damage, the spring floods of 1936, which covered the floor to a depth of one foot. All current records are safely maintained in modern equipment in the collector's offices.

1. The first step in the process of identifying a problem is to define the problem. This involves identifying the symptoms of the problem and determining the scope of the problem. Once the problem has been defined, the next step is to identify the causes of the problem. This involves identifying the factors that are contributing to the problem and determining the root cause of the problem. Once the causes of the problem have been identified, the next step is to develop a plan to address the problem. This involves identifying the actions that need to be taken to address the problem and determining the resources that are needed to implement the plan. Once a plan has been developed, the next step is to implement the plan. This involves taking the actions that are outlined in the plan and monitoring the progress of the plan. Finally, the last step in the process is to evaluate the results of the plan. This involves determining whether the plan has been successful in addressing the problem and identifying any lessons learned from the process.

TISBURY

C.S. Norton Estate, Main St.

Previous to the year 1912, this office was a subport of the Edgartown district and operated chiefly for inspection purposes. In that year, the Edgartown office was closed, all records were transferred to this office, and a deputy collector was installed. At the time of the survey, records were found to be in good condition generally. The office was closed April 1, 1937; this district was added to that served by the subport of New Bedford; and the records were to be transferred to the New Bedford Custom House.

WORCESTER

OFFICE OF DEPUTY COLLECTOR Franklin Square

A customs office was established in Worcester in August, 1900. The city remained an independent port of entry until the reorganization of the Customs Service in July, 1913, when it was reclassified as a support under the jurisdiction of the Boston headquarters. The agency has moved twice during the 37 years of its existence, from the old Post Office Building when that was demolished in 1930 to temporary offices on Foster Street, and then to its present location in the new Federal Building, which was erected in 1933 on the site of the old Post Office Building. Here it occupies modern offices on the third floor and shares a general storeroom, in the basement, with the Post Office Department. A deputy collector and a small staff carry on the department activities, which consist, primarily, of collecting customs fees, duties, and other revenue, and the bonding of imports and exports warehoused in the vicinity. The records of the agency are intact from the date of its establishment. The older records in the basement have been damaged somewhat in their two removals and by poor storage conditions, but all current material is safely maintained in modern equipment in the collector's offices. A chronological filing system is used for practically all records.

1. The first step in the process of the investigation is the identification of the problem. This is done by the investigator who is responsible for the study. The investigator must first identify the problem and then determine the scope of the study. The next step is to design the study. This involves determining the research objectives, the research questions, and the research hypotheses. The investigator must also determine the appropriate research methods and the data collection procedures. The third step is to collect the data. This involves the actual collection of the data from the subjects of the study. The fourth step is to analyze the data. This involves the use of statistical methods to analyze the data and to determine the results of the study. The final step is to report the results of the study. This involves the preparation of a report that summarizes the findings of the study and discusses the implications of the results.
